& Global Justice*

Jakob von Uexkull is the founder of the Right Livelihood Awards, also known as the Alternative Nobel Prizes. These awards have been presented in the Swedish Parliament for the past 25 years to individuals meeting the challenges of environmental pollution, the danger of nuclear war, the abuse of human rights and the plight of the impoverished. He is also a founder of the World Future Council, a body of 50 globally recognized wise elders, pioneers and youth leaders, that was formed to give voice to the interests of future generations on issues related to the environment, peace, justice, human development and human rights. The World Future Council seeks to provide an ethical dimension to the most important issues of our time. Von Uexkull is a former member of the European Parliament and the UNESCO Commission on Human Duties and Responsibilities. He has dedicated his life to protecting the welfare of the planet and its citizens, particularly those who are most vulnerable.

This annual lecture series was inaugurated in 2002 in honor of Frank K. Kelly, a founder and senior vice president of the Nuclear Age Peace Foundation.
