Nuclear Age Peace Foundation

*Waging Peace
for a More Secure World*

"The Nuclear Age Peace Foundation has a vision for a better world—I endorse their work and encourage those who are complacent to make a lifelong commitment and to join the winning side."

—The Most Reverend
Desmond M. Tutu

"The Nuclear Age Peace Foundation is a unique and remarkable organization. It works with admirable persistence against the greatest threat confronting humanity—the existence, proliferation, and potential use of nuclear weapons. The Foundation deserves the Nobel Peace Prize."

—Daniel Ellsberg

Since 1982, the Nuclear Age Peace Foundation has worked to enhance both global and human security and is a voice for millions of people concerned about the fate of the planet. The Foundation is one of the world's preeminent educational and advocacy organizations working for nuclear disarmament, strengthened international law and the empowerment of a new generation of peace leaders.

International Reach

The Foundation is recognized by the United Nations (UN) as a Peace Messenger Organization and is on the Roster in consultative status to the United Nations Economic and Social Council. We have an outstanding group of Advisors, including many Nobel Peace Laureates. During the last two decades, Foundation board members, officers and staff have made presentations to hundreds of national and international conferences and symposia. The Foundation has representatives at the United Nations, in Latin America, Europe and Asia, and in Washington, D.C.

Effecting Change

The Foundation works in four major areas:

Enhancing Security by Reducing Nuclear Dangers

Since its inception, the cornerstone of the Foundation's work has been to enhance security by working to reduce and eliminate nuclear threats. The Foundation has provided leadership in the establishment of coalitions, including the Middle Powers Initiative, a coalition of eight international organizations working with governments and civil society toward a treaty banning nuclear weapons; and Abolition 2000, a global network for the elimination of nuclear weapons. We helped found and continue to provide leadership to the International Network of Engineers and Scientists for Global Responsibility (INES). We also developed and launched an Appeal to Eliminate the Nuclear Weapons Threat to Humanity. More than 100 world leaders, including 38 Nobel Laureates, signed and endorsed the Appeal.

Strengthening International Law

Respect for the rule of law is fundamental to the success of democratic systems throughout the world. Treaties among nations can only exist in a world that respects international law and provides sufficient authority to international bodies to monitor and enforce those agreements. The Foundation participates each year in conferences at the United Nations seeking progress on nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament. The Foundation sponsors lectures and symposia on critical issues of international law.

Educating and Empowering Youth

The Foundation's Youth Empowerment Initiative is on the cutting edge of programs to inspire and empower a new generation of peace leaders. It is one of the few nationally sustained peace programs involving high school and college students. The Initiative includes Peace Leadership Trainings, educational curricula, internships, forums and public advocacy campaigns. Thousands of students have participated in these activities and many have gone on to become leaders on their campuses, in their communities and in organizations around the world.

Providing Quality Independent Research and Information

An informed citizenry is necessary to elect responsible decision-makers. In turn, informed decision-makers are necessary to create effective changes in policy. The Foundation is a leader in public education and provides independent analysis to decision-makers around the world. Our public education is conducted primarily through our websites, which attract more than two million visitors each year. Other means to disseminate information include The Sunflower, a free e-newsletter sent to some 10,000 subscribers worldwide; reports and briefing books; books; and lectures.
